Course catalogue for the autumn of 2022

The course catalogue for the autumn semester is now published on the web and will be open for application during the period 19 April –16 May.

Course catalogue autumn 2022 \(and course vacancies this semester\)

Information about admission has been sent to all course directors and contact persons of the courses that are advertised in the catalogue. Please read the information carefully.

It's interesting to see that the experiences from distance teaching during the pandemic clearly have influenced the design of many courses, as more than one third of the courses in the catalogue are planned for distance teaching to some extent.

Course evaluation outcomes 2021

Looking back on the pandemic years 2020 and 2021 we can see that mean values and standard deviation of the answers to the course evaluation questions are unchanged compared to 2019. On average, 95 % of all doctoral students can recommend the courses they have attended to other doctoral students.

The summary report will be published on the website Course evaluation and analysis of doctoral courses (under documents) within short.

Course evaluation – send your participant lists in time

The course evaluations are carried out by Teaching and Learning (TL/UoL) who are provided with a list of the planned courses, both the ones advertised via the course catalogue and those arranged within the research schools.

However, to be able to do this they need a participant list from the course provider in time, which is the day after the course start. This enables them to prepare for sending the course evaluation to the participants the day after the course end-date. The email address to use is: evaluation@ki.se

Expectations on course analyses

The course analysis is the course director's summary of the course, together with his/her reflections and any changes planned as a result of these.

How such an analysis should be formulated and what to emphasise is now described in more detail on the website, see the subheading course analysis - the course director's evaluation.

Feedback on the course analysis is given by the doctoral programme, the research school or the Course and Programme Committee, depending on source of financing.
